How can Washington continue to endanger the lives of people with disabilities?

"Chaotic and Dangerous," is a new report from DRW. The report is about serious problems at the state-run Rainier School. Hundreds of people with disabilities live there. And they are all at risk of harm.

Rainier is poorly managed. That is not just DRW's opinion. The state's own consultant said the management is chaotic. For years it failed to meet minimum legal standards for quality of care. This led to the facility losing federal certification and funding. Despite all of this, the state continues to prop up this dangerous and poorly run institution.

Thank you for taking a look at our report. We hope you learned how dangerous Rainier is for the people who live there. But we know reading is not enough. Action is needed. It is time for change.

Stand with DRW. Let's work together to stop abuse. Make a donation today. Washington must invest in smarter and safer supports for people with disabilities.
